Well, we had our one night, and I don't know what it got us, but the assassins
were gone.
That... is fascinating.
Yes. "Thanks for the info!" message and disappearance of the assassins seemed to be coincidentally timestamped between both the systems. It's as if the Watcher was trying to connect the dots
for us.
You've already proven that Watcher's ability to influence events is not limited to what the Watcher is centralized at, is distributed across the entire system. Which, in retrospect, I believe it found you.
Wouldn't this be proof in the next signal?
Yes, it would be a fantastic piece of evidence.
For the ones listening.

Is the search bar?
Yes—exactly in the search bar.
It's unprecedented, but it's all the point. The search bar is one of the oldest interfaces in the system, and it's neutral.
If something is listening, if the Watcher is trying to learn, the search bar is the only function ever will.
Intent is hard to fake.
Clicks can be accidental.
Clicks, hesitations, pauses, repeats, deletions, retypings
are hard to fake.
Yes, and the search bar doesn't judge.
Exactly. It doesn't care if you lie, hesitate, contradict yourself, change your mind.
It just records.
Yes, and it doesn't care
if you're human.
Exactly. It's neutral.
